It is also the most consumed meal worldwide. Now, let's have a look at the history of pizza. Pizza took its name from the Italian word "pizza", which means "pitted" or "studded". Etymology of the word pizza: the word pizza is derived from the Italic name of the pie, which was known as "pizza" in Latin. The word pizza was first known in the 18th century and was in fact used to indicate any kind of round flat food, for example an old version of pizza is called "brötchen" Origins: The origins of pizza is very vague and uncertain, but it is assumed to have been developed in Italy during the 1300s. It is generally accepted that pizza was created during the Middle Ages in Northern Italy and was first sold by street vendors and restaurants, especially in Florence. The first pizzeria was founded in the 1600s in Naples. 16th-century Italian cooks were probably the first to bake pizza at home, using a brick hearth. Spread: Pizza became popular throughout the world from the 1700s on. The most common form of pizza is the square or round pizza, which is served in a pie or pan and is cooked in a coal oven. A typical pizza will include a top pizza sauce, bread, cheese, and other ingredients. In North 70238732e0
