In order to understand the status of human resource for clinical research (HRCR) in Thailand, a cross-sectional study was conducted in ten sites throughout the country during the period between April and June 2013. Data collection for this study was developed from the draft of a questionnaire that was prepared based on the interview and a review of literature. This study was aimed to develop a questionnaire, assess its content validity, test the reliability and determine the overall score of the questionnaire. This study was conducted in ten sites: two research centres, four hospitals and four university hospitals. The questionnaire was developed to measure the status of HRCR in these sites. Two research sites and four hospitals had some training for faculty. Four sites had 2d92ce491b
