I have built a rails 3.0.3 site that is working well on the production server but I need to move it so that it is used from the main site and the sub-sites that I need to use. I need to convert this site to a CMS site where users from the main site have access to everything but for the sub-sites I need them to just be accessible as a standard website on the same domain. What would be the best approach to solving this problem? I have not built any CMS systems before and I am not really sure where to start. A: I would use a reverse proxy like nginx, apache, or lighty. Or, probably best, use one of these CMS's. You'd configure your proxy to direct people to your app. www.mydomain.com/new page yourdomain.com/new page Then you'd just need to push the content to your subdomains. www.mydomain.com/content/2009/04/01/thisisadifferentpage
