Lebanon's national carrier, Middle East Airlines, said on Saturday that a fire broke out shortly after takeoff from Paris on Saturday, leading to an emergency landing in the Algerian city of Algiers. The inflight fire forced passengers to evacuate the aircraft, the Lebanon-based airline said. M.E.A. said the trouble started in the aircraft's baggage compartment, apparently during take-off. The jet then overshot the runway and came to a stop in a nearby forest. Passengers were sent to a local hospital. "The airport doctor has reported that the plane is intact," M.E.A. said, adding that the passengers were able to use air-conditioning and power to restart the jet after it landed. The company will "fully investigate" the fire, M.E.A. said. The company sent a team of investigators and engineers to the airport in Algiers to investigate the fire
