A potential complication of interventional medical procedures using radio-frequency electromagnetic field (RF-EMF) has been investigated. An in vivo experiment was conducted in a rat model to assess the effect of RF-EMF on the immune system and the blood-mediated inflammatory response. When a pulsed RF-EMF was applied to the skin, the white blood cells (WBCs) and their migratory properties were altered for 3 h after the exposure. The susceptibility of WBCs to the killing activity of the neutrophils in the blood was reduced in the experimental rats compared with the control rats. When the WBCs of the blood were stimulated with the chemotactic peptide, formyl-methionyl-leucyl-phenylalanine (fMLP), the chemotactic migration of WBCs was inhibited in the experimental rats. The results of these experiments suggest that exposure to RF-EMF could affect the function of leukocytes and the activity of immune surveillance. The MOLTEN Cauldron: A DIY Armageddon-Fueled Effigy of the United States. What better way to celebrate the greatest country in the world than to superimpose said country's point of view onto a huge, inferno-fueled effigy, effectively creating what is, in many ways, the United States' own "MOLTEN CUP" (for further discussion of the importance of the "M" in "MOLTEN CUP," please see the video for further details.) The "Cauldron" was built over the course of a six-week construction period, entirely by my good friend and co-co-creator Kyle McVay
