keygen 17The cannabinoid binding protein of C6 glioma cells selectively inhibits a nicotinic acetylcholine receptor.
A heparin-solubilized protein from rat C6 glioma cells which specifically binds radiolabeled (3H)CP55940 was isolated and characterized. When assayed in a gel retardation assay the protein inhibited the binding of (3H)CP55940 to its cell surface receptor with a K_i of 3.4 μM , demonstrating the presence of a single class of high affinity cannabinoid receptors on these cells. In addition, the protein was shown to exhibit antagonistic activity towards the inhibitory effects of CP55940 on the (3H)muscimol-labeled nicotinic acetylcholine receptor in a concentration-dependent manner, with a Schild plot slope (0.92) indicating a competitive antagonism. The protein was found to have a molecular weight of approximately 60 kDa and an is
