It does not matter whether it is on the local computer or on a network. Files in this category include both user and system files. Long path files can be accessed through long path browser. As a result, people might see long path files instead of the real file they are searching for. What are long path files? Long path files are the files stored on network, so the real name of the file or folder is different than its name that you see in your computer. In other words, the real name of a long path file is not the one which you can see in your computer. What do long path files do? Long path files contain shortcuts to certain resources on a network. They can be shortcuts to shared folders, printers or other network resources. People use them when they want to send large files, because the size of these files is limited to the hard drive on your computer. However, these long path files also contain a lot of personal information, because they can contain usernames, passwords, files and directories. People don't want the others to see these files because it can lead to security problems. Do long path files show up in my computer? No, they don't. Because long path files are stored on a network, they are not visible in your computer. People only see the long path file which they are accessing on the network. Long path files also show up on the network, but these files don't contain any information or personal data. How do I remove long path files from my computer? If you want to remove long path files from your computer, you have to delete them from your computer. But these files are not available through the windows explorer because they are on
