The shootings took place on Brookfield Drive in Brookfield Heights about 12:30 p.m. Two of the victims were rushed to the hospital in critical condition, according to WKBN-TV Channel 27. They both survived. A White Castle employee told WKBN that he was driving down Brookfield Drive when a woman who had been in the parade was shot at. "I stopped and the guy ran up to her and shot her in the leg. I went around the corner, got a good look at him and he ran right by me. Then the other one came around and shot her right there," said the man, who declined to give his name. "I just feel so bad. My heart hurts for them and they're just sitting in the hospital right now. I mean, these are children that have grown up to become young men and young women. They have families, they have brothers and sisters. It's really, really, really hard," he said. A friend of the woman who was shot said she was in stable condition. "I know she was in her car and I heard the whole thing, she was in her car and the bullet went through the window and just grazed her leg. She has a broken leg and she's going to be in the hospital for a couple days," said the friend. Another witness said she saw the shootings and called 911. "I was at the bank and I was coming back and I seen this white car. I saw the first guy get out. He was in a suit and he had on a yellow shirt and the second guy got out of the car with a gun," said the witness. The shootings are being investigated by the State Police Bureau of Criminal Investigation. from the idea that biology can be objective science that operates entirely on its own, as an autonomous domain, divorced from, and just as a matter of indifference to, the ideas and values and emotions of the humans and other animals who engage it.
