Husband. We have been together for 10 years and still feel like newlyweds even though we are no longer together. So, I am finally coming out of my year long personal hiatus. I'm sorry that I have missed blogging on this blog but life has been crazy and I just didn't have time. 10 years is the longest we have ever been apart. That doesn't mean we didn't have our issues but it has been a lot easier to deal with them. We are no longer the angry and resentful couple we used to be. I still remember the first time I met him, I was instantly captivated. I knew he was something special, even though I wasn't sure what it was. I was pretty sure we would get married and then have children. I think I was more excited than he was. We were in college and really wanting to have a family together. It's funny that even though I was pretty sure he was the one, we met in the summer before his senior year of college and I was going to start my junior year at his school. Our date was so romantic. We drove to a secret place in the woods of Wisconsin. I am not going to reveal what the place was but let's just say it was a beautiful place. He picked me up in his Jeep and even though we were just sitting there together, he still had to steer the Jeep. We drove around and I found out that he lived just a few miles away from where we were going. I wondered if it was too late for me to ask him if he wanted to take me home and I would meet his family. I think I was really nervous. I guess I was still a bit unsure of where I stood. We went to his room and I remember he was different from anyone I had ever met. He was shy. In fact, he was quiet. He seemed awkward. But, when he looked at me, I was spellbound. I knew right then and there that he was the one I was going to marry. I walked him to my dorm room, we made small
