To study the distribution of scl-70 gene polymorphisms in healthy persons and systemic sclerosis (SSc) patients, and to analyze the association between scl-70 gene polymorphisms and clinical characteristics in SSc patients. A polymerase chain reaction-restriction fragment length polymorphism assay was applied to determine scl-70 polymorphisms. In total, 286 healthy controls and 85 SSc patients were screened for scl-70 polymorphisms. The frequency of the scl-70 alleles and genotypes was not significantly different between SSc patients and healthy controls. We did not find any significant association between scl-70 gene alleles and clinical characteristics. Scl-70 gene polymorphisms were not different between healthy controls and SSc patients.
