-6-78-3){#F3} The presence of tumour antigens causes a higher antigen presentation capability of dendritic cells \[[@B8],[@B9]\]. The amount of antigen presenting cells is critically important for the induction of antigen-specific Th1 cells in tumour immunity \[[@B10]\]. Thus, the cellular immunity modulating capability of Nios II is suggested to be associated with its more potent DC maturation capability. In contrast, it is also suggested that the contact between DCs and cancer cells induces tumour-specific tolerance or activation of suppressive DCs for the induction of tumour-specific tolerance \[[@B11]\]. Thus, the DC maturation inducing capability of Nios II may counteract the suppressive function of DCs induced by contact with cancer cells. In addition to all these, Nios II is a TLR2/1 agonist \[[@B5],[@B6]\], and TLR2/1 is known to enhance the maturation of DCs by enhancing IL-1β and IL-6 production \[[@B4]\]. Furthermore, TLR2/1 also enhances IL-12 and IL-27 production \[[@B12]\]. Thus, Nios II may enhance the maturation of DCs by increasing IL-1β, IL-6, IL-12 and IL-27 production. Conclusions ========== We demonstrated that Nios II causes maturation of BMDCs and macrophages and stimulates T cell immunity in a murine DTH model, and the cellular immunity enhancing capability of Nios II is through the enhancement of DC maturation. Thus, Nios II may be a useful adjuvant for the delivery of cancer vaccine. Methods ======= Mice ---- BALB/c (H-2^d^) and C57BL/6 (H-2^b^) mice were purchased from Japan SLC. In patients with an early lung cancer, a curative resection (R0) can be performed in most cases. Additionally, a definitive diagnosis with lymph node dissection is important, since a negative lymph node resection specimen assures a completely negative resection (R0). A definitive diagnosis is based on the histology of a small needle biopsy specimen. If a diagnosis is made through bronchoscopy, systemic examination with the exclusion of metastasis is performed. If no lesions can be confirmed at the systemic examination, a biopsy through endobronchial ultrasound is performed to get a definitive diagnosis. If the bronchoscopic-guided biopsy technique cannot be applied, thoracoscopy is performed under local anaesthesia. If the diagnosis of an early lung cancer cannot be confirmed with a definitive diagnosis, a non-operative treatment approach is recommended.Concurrent tracheal injury and esophageal injury from a blunt neck trauma in an adult with normal esophageal motility.
