During this time, the operating theatre list started with an average of 12 peds/week and increased to 20 peds/week \[@B7]\]. Since then the waiting list for adult patients has remained stable but, as mentioned, the peds waiting list has continued to increase. Currently, the median time between the first examination and surgery is 2.2 days, representing an ongoing increase in waiting times. Although the overall median is just below 4 days, it is an important factor considering that children are more vulnerable to surgical disease and have greater risk of surgical complications \[@B17],[@B21]\]. Optimising waiting times is an important factor in maintaining the quality of care. Along with waiting times, the quality of services also affects the waiting list. The waiting list will only be considered efficient if there are regular lists of patients reviewed by surgeons to determine if they can perform the operation. Since the introduction of the first method, a list of patients has been produced to look at the surgical performance of the surgeons and then used to determine if they can fulfil an operation. One consequence of this is that the waiting

Community-acquired pneumonia in the human immunodeficiency virus-infected patients with multiple drug resistance to pneumonia therapeutic drugs. Infection with the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) is associated with a higher incidence of community-acquired pneumonia (CAP). The aim of the study was to determine the etiology, diagnostic, and therapeutic options of CAP in HIV-positive patients at a tertiary hospital, and to analyze the clinical-laboratory characteristics of the patients and the results of treatment. A descriptive, cross-sectional study of adult patients with CAP, who were diagnosed between January 2005 and December 2010, was carried out. Diagnosis of CAP was established based on the criteria of the Spanish consensus statement on the diagnosis and treatment of CAP. Patients had an HIV diagnosis and were receiving a combination of antiretroviral medications. Fifty 3e33713323
