Q: Make a JTable cell autofill with text-content of a JButton

How do I make the text of a JButton in a JTable cell autofill the JTextField of a JTable? So far, I can get the value of a JTextField from a custom TableCell Editor. But I can't figure out how to get the JTextField from the JButton cell. I use a JTable with a custom TableCellEditor, which can be used to edit a textfield in the cell. I've got 4 textfields in one row. I want to autofill the 2nd textfield when the JButton is clicked. But the 2nd textfield is not editable, so I can't store the content of that cell there. Thanks for the help!

A: You should implement a custom TableCellEditor and override the getCellEditorComponent(DefaultTableModel model, int row, int column), whenever you click the button simply set its text(remember to make a difference between the "selected" button and the "normal" button) and when finished call the super. You can have a look at how TableCellEditor implementation works here: TableCellRenderer tutorial

This invention relates to an improved system for supplying alcohol to a portable hand-held power tool for the purpose of ensuring that the drinking water held in the hand-held tool is kept free of debris. More particularly, this invention relates to a system which automatically supplies an alcohol-based cleanser to the drinking water holding tank of the hand-held power tool. It is well known that hand-held power tools such as drills, saws and the like are operated with water that is typically held in a tank in the tool. While the drinking water is initially clean, it often becomes contaminated with small particles of materials such as sawdust or metallic debris which is either generated during use or is simply carried in by the user's clothing and/or hands. As this contamination gradually accumulates in the water, the supply of water becomes cloudy or murky which makes it much less effective as a coolant in the power tool. It is also possible to contaminate the drinking water with bacteria. It

Mark 16:15. As a Christian we should look at our faith from the perspective of a missional church with the necessary implications to the pastoral, evangelistic, spiritual and relational ministries. As a missional church we believe the Bible to be the inspired Word of God and so we are ordained to proclaim God’s Word, and we are involved in mission, so we have a responsibility to undertake ministry that changes lives. Mission It is our conviction that Christians are a mission-oriented church that exists for the sake of people and the glory of God. We are so completely owned by Jesus, that our mission is totally dependent upon his gift of salvation which is extended to all who will receive him. His gospel of grace is our vehicle. Our primary focus is to plant churches and make disciples. This takes place through evangel 3e33713323
