Many of the other password storage apps are a hassle to set up. I'm glad I found PasswordPal. It is quick, relatively simple and works! I had originally tried to use KeePass but it was a little complex for me. After trying out PasswordPal, I'm sold. The best part? It works for Android. It will likely never be my go-to password manager (for a few reasons), but it's a great addition to my setup.

What's New in the?

"PasswordPal is a secure vault for storing all your credentials. Each password is encrypted and stored securely on the user's device. Credentials are also reviewed, and you can easily add new credentials, or update an existing one. On top of that PasswordPal also lets you save your credentials, or has the ability to auto-fill them in the future". Key Features: PasswordPal offers the following interesting and useful features: ✔ Add Your Passwords PasswordPal has a clean, simple, and intuitive UI. You can add a new entry, edit an existing one, and delete unwanted credentials ✔ Review Credentials PasswordPal highlights the strength of every password. You can also view all your un-masked passwords at a glance ✔ Change Your Master Password PasswordPal lets you change your master password. You can also set password strength limits to keep your passwords secure ✔ Password Strength Test You can use PasswordPal to automatically test your credentials. A free account to developer's site is necessary to enable this feature ✔ Auto-fill PasswordPal supports auto-filling credentials when visiting websites ✔ Auto-fill for Web Services PasswordPal supports autofilling on popular Web services such as Amazon, Google, and Apple ✔ Statistics PasswordPal highlights your credentials by classifying them into four categories: well-known accounts, easily-cracked accounts, compromised accounts, and accounts with strong passwords.
