This is a tool that enables you to activate and deactivate the Windows Hyper-V feature in Windows 10 Home. It contains a few different files to make the process of activating the virtual machine simpler. Features: This is a Batch file that enables you to install and uninstall the Windows Hyper-V feature in

Windows 10 Home. It contains two files that you need to execute before you can access and use the tool. This tool is compatible with Windows 10. System requirements:

Administrator privileges required Your feedback is appreciated. A: It is possible, but this is not official Microsoft support channel. You are correct. I have confirmed that Windows 10 Home does not have full Hyper-V support, and I've even gone so far as to contact Microsoft support and asked about it. I found nothing of it, so I asked them what was going on. They simply said that they don't have the resources to support every version of Windows, and that they don't have the luxury of giving it support to every single version of Windows. You are right that you need the Pro version, and that it should support full Hyper-

V on the Home version.

Please note that this is an edge case bug/feature, and is a potential security risk for this specific feature.

Thank you for the info. I wasn't able to find any info on this, but I was able to contact Microsoft support and ask them about it. I asked them if this is a bug, and they said that they don't have any info on it. They also said that this is a bug, and that they aren't willing to support it. I found this to be a bit strange, as they do support the full Hyper-V on the Pro version, and they do support the Windows Information Protection service on the Home version. Perhaps there are some tweaks that they don't want to support. Enable Windows Sandbox in Windows 10 Home is a tool containing a batch file that enables you to install and uninstall the Hyper-V feature in the aforementioned operating system. On a side note, the Hyper-V is actually a relatively new feature for the Pro version as well, considering that it was introduced with the 1903 patch. It is important to note that you need to make sure that you meet all the requirements for installing Sandbox, as otherwise you cannot activate the virtual machine. Moreover, according to the developer, the main reason why you can preview, but not activate it is because the files are already present in the operating system. You can get started by running the BAT file, preferably using an account with Administrator rights, and the app begins to load all of the packages. After a restart, you should be able to access and activate Sandbox. -----

If you happen to have Windows 10 Home as your primary operating system, then chances are that you already noticed that it is missing several important features, which are solely available for the Pro version. From BitLocker Device Encryption to Windows Information Protection to Group Policy and virtual machine, all these features – along with numerous others – are not available for Windows 10 Home. older Windows 10 version. The KB says that it is in the recent version, but I can't find it in there. The only thing I can find in the so called "Recent" Updates is for the W10 1803 Update, and it is saying that it is coming in a few days. I am currently running the W10 1809 version. When I click on the W10 1803 Update, it says: "Unknown. Automatic Updates are enabled. There is a new update that will be installed at a later time."
