Tophaceous gout is a very rare condition. We report the case of a 47-year-old man who presented with erythematous plaques of the lower legs. It was initially thought that the lesions were associated with focal vasculitis. During the follow up, the patient developed a purulent material in association with a subcutaneous nodule in the left calf. After several microbiological studies, the diagnosis was revised to tophaceous gout. The gout process was treated successfully with colchicine. Tophaceous gout should be considered in the differential diagnosis of skin and subcutaneous nodules, especially in immunocompromised patients.Q: How to avoid the same lagging commands to load in datalist and activate a dropdownlist on form submit I have a Page (ASP.NET) as follows:
