Last but not least, during the conversion process, all the initial elements will be preserved, such as the layout, texts or images.[Isolation of adenocarcinoma-derived epithelial cells from human lung by their proliferating and high-molecular-weight cytokeratin expression]. A method of isolation of adenocarcinoma-derived epithelial cells from human lung using their proliferating and high-molecular-weight cytokeratin expression was developed. In addition to that, adenocarcinoma cells were also detected by staining with anti-human-lung adenocarcinoma monoclonal antibody, KL1. A549 cells were isolated from human non-small cell lung carcinoma cell line A549, and human normal bronchial epithelial cell line BEP2D. The A549 cells were plated on type I collagen gels at low density, and then were harvested by trypsin and recovered cells were cultured in a floating culture for 5 days. One population of epithelial cells that proliferated intensely and expressed high-molecular-weight cytokeratin was isolated. The isolated A549 cells had morphological characteristics of epithelial cells and expressed several epithelial differentiation markers: cytokeratin, epithelial mucin and major histocompatibility complex class I. However, A549 cells did not express carcinoembryonic antigen. When cultured on type I collagen gels, isolated epithelial cells continued to express high-molecular-weight cytokeratin. These cells are assumed to be adenocarcinoma cells derived from the lung. In addition, adenocarcinoma cells 6a5afdb4c
