Menu Everything You Wanted To Know About Fall The changing leaves are my favorite. By: Davi Walliser The changing leaves are my favorite. The varying colors range from vibrant red, orange, yellow, and deep brown shades to contrasting white. They tell me the changing seasons are coming and soon the cold weather will sweep through the area. Since I'm still sweating like a very hot summer day, I can't wait for the fall to bring cold breezes and cool temperatures. This is the time for pumpkin spice everything, the blood moon, and of course the change in the foliage colors. But fall isn't just a season. Fall is a natural phenomenon that is recognized by scientists. The change in foliage begins to happen after the fall equinox in September or October. According to Do you know the History of the Fall Equinox? day: "The last day of summer and the first day of fall. At this time of day, the western horizon is turned to the Sun, and the day is still warm (before Earth's rotation is considered). At this time, the Moon appears to be stationary in the northern sky." I like to think of the fall and winter seasons as a natural phenomenon. This means that we aren't the only ones who experience change after the fall equinox. Even the land and sea turn to and fro. Even the seasons change – the fall equinox or Autumnal Equinox is defined by the falling of the first hard frost that changes the flow of the ground and the land. We all love autumn. The changing of the seasons is a natural phenomenon. We celebrate when the leaves change colors and when the first fall frost appears. And as fall approaches, the air is cooler. It is a time of reflection, relaxation, and reflection about what is coming the next season. Autumnal Equinox: It is the day of the fall equinox, or the fall and the spring equinox. This happens when the Sun crosses the equator and is no longer at the zenith on a day. It is one of the four seasonal solstices. There are four seasonal solstices which all occur when the sun reaches the solstices and stops on the equinox. They are: Winter Solstice on Dec. 21 Spring Equinox on March 21

What's New In?

Jegasena Jegasena (c.) was a king of Sagas or a rule of the indigenous Kurus of North India. His dynasty is associated with the Samudragupta's empire. Jegasena ruled during approximately 330-380 CE, according to the Gupta Empire's political calendar. He was the son of Bhagadatta who is associated with the regency of Chashti. His father's name is not known. Samudragupta, the Bharata dynasty's first ruler, who was assassinated in 322 CE, had left no heir, and his son, Samudragupta's cousin, the Samudravarma, was installed in power. Jegasena's allies were the Barah provinces in the east. Rajya-Ratna, the nephew of Samudragupta, established an alliance with Jegasena. They also had common foes in the Rashtrakuta king (or Dantidurga and Vikramaditya VI). In a campaign against the "Rashtrakuta kingdom, Naddula, Danta and other king of the southern shores of the Vindhya mountains" and their ally, the Kanchi king Vishnugupta allied with Jegasena. In 366 CE, Rajya-Ratna (probably on the side of the North), assassinated the Samudragupta, by poisoning. In the late 2nd/early 3rd centuries CE, Jegasena gave refuge to Valabhi ruler Dantidurga. Valabhi had been a tributary of the Gupta empire since the mid-4th century. Jegasena had also acknowledged him as his liege-lord. He gave him important high offices in his realm.
