Textures and Patterns As an image processor, Photoshop is a very powerful tool for texturing and pattern-making. It has a wide range of features for texturing and patterns, as well as a collection of objects to use as textures and patterns. The texture features in Photoshop enable you to * Create and apply textures to a document. * Replace pixel areas in an image with textures. * Adjust the appearance of the edges of a document. * Organize, paint, and edit several different textures together. * Create and use patterns.

Finding a Way Back Home It's been a long time since I've posted. Over the last couple of years, we've moved pretty often, and that has kept me busy, so I haven't had much time for writing. But I'm back home, and I'm going to try to post more regularly here. I'm in Utah now, but I went back to school this past year, so I'm not really sure how much free time I'll have. I'm hoping to have time to work on some games though. Now that I have a stable PC again, I'm trying to become more comfortable with the platform, which is actually pretty easy since it was designed to teach games. I've been playing with XNA all semester and have put together a pretty good amount of resources on the subject; Haven't had much time to work on my games lately, but I'm hoping to work on more now that I'm more settled. Investment bank Morgan Stanley is raising a $125m bond for the state-owned Nigerian power company Power Holding Company of Nigeria (PHCN). Morgan Stanley will serve as the sole arranger of the new six-year issue, which is expected to be priced at around 143bp over swap rate and is due for redemption in November 2020. The bank will be on the same side as strategic and institutional investors, the company said. The bond will be part of Morgan Stanley's push to become more involved in the sovereign bond market since it last raised a $500m five-year floating-rate note in February. The $125m underwriting fee is expected to be split with several co-managers. The deal is part of Morgan Stanley's push to diversify its low-yield clientele in emerging markets, and could be the first in a series of deals for the bank, the company said. "Our concentration in emerging markets is largely driven by the desire to have greater exposure to fixed income assets that are a proxy for the performance of the real economy," said the company's president in the Middle East and Africa, Michael Angell. "In many emerging markets, we see low-interest yields combined with low commodity prices as key factors to attract investors." The deal was closed

Q: why using UPDATE statement of mysql if we know that the columns doesn't change Is there any good reason of using UPDATE statement if we know that the columns don't change? Why is it not better to use INSERT statement instead? A: Sometimes the columns don't change, but the data does. In that case, an update is likely to be cheaper than a insert. In MySQL 5.0.x, the statement UPDATE table SET col1 = val1, col2 = val2... WHERE id = 1; is more efficient than the statement INSERT INTO table VALUES (val1, val2,...), because it can use more of the index on id. Also, if the data is small, it is faster to append a new row than it is to insert the data and then update the row. In general, performance will be improved by using less logical operations. If you need the database to take the same time regardless of whether you change the data or not, use a command like SELECT * FROM... instead of a SELECT statement. var t0, v0, pos; t0 = 1; v0 = ""; t1 = ""; t2 = ""; for (pos in t2) v0 += pos + t1; t1 = ""; for (pos in t0) t1 += pos + t2; return v0; } function isArray(n) { return n!= null && (typeof n == "object" || typeof n == "function"); } function isDate(d) { return d!= null && d instanceof Date; } function isJson(n) { return isObject(n) && n.toJSON && (typeof n.toJSON) == "function"; } function isNumber(n) { return typeof n == "number" || (typeof(0.1) == "number" && n - 0.1 == 0); } function isString(n) { return typeof n == "string"; } function isUndefined(n) { return typeof n == "undefined"; } function lspTimeout() { var lspTimeout = 1; setTimeout(function() { var lspTimeout
