In the exhibition hall "Manege" from November 1 to 8 will be exhibited the exhibition "Paris - Berlin in the mirror of the art of the XX century". It will show more than 400 paintings, photographs and drawings on the theme "Russia-France. 1900s - 1980s. of the XX century. The exhibition demonstrates the most important and interesting directions in the development of the artistic process and reflects the main directions and tendencies in the art of one of the most striking countries of the world - France and Germany at the beginning of the XX century. The exhibition contains over 120 exhibits of paintings, graphics, sculpture by leading French and German artists, as well as works by less well-known authors. Art of Paris at the turn of the century is represented by works of Jean-Paul Laurent, Gustave Courbet, Claude Monet, Amedeo Modigliani, Henri de Toulouse-Lautrec. Amedeo Modigliani is one of the brightest representatives of the Art Nouveau period. His paintings are full of passion, expression, the desire to express the inner world of man. And not by chance one of the most famous works of the artist is "Portrait of Jeanne Ebutterne". In 1911, while creating this masterpiece artist's wife died. This sad event so shocked Amedeo that he practically gave up painting. He tried to numb the pain of creativity, but it failed him. His paintings became even more expressive, they appeared tragic. And when in 1917 he created another masterpiece, this same tragedy became apparent. Canvases, which admired and artists, and fans of painting, and ordinary viewers, were written during the First World War. He wrote on the theme of the tragic, and the painting "Burlaki on the Volga" turned out so impressive and expressive that his works are very popular today. In this article we will look at the biography and work of the artist, learn what he was based on when he wrote this canvas, and why there was a tragic idea in this work. Childhood and Youth Jean Baptiste Simeon Chardin was born in Paris in the family of a craftsman in May 1699. Like his parents, he belonged to the silk and wool merchants. Chardin's father was a descendant of a noble family, and since childhood the boy had to constantly prove that he was a worthy representative of the family. So, in 1626, at the age of twelve, he became an apprentice to his father, who was engaged in silk painting. However, he had to stay in this occupation for a short time, after which he was called up for military service.
