Here are some of them to help you with your decision to purchase the project. "dreBurn MP3 is a free, but very good software to burn an audio CD project. This project allows the user to record the tracks of a CD project in a defined order. It's very easy and intuitive to use, but don't expect it to be the best-made software to record a CD. dreBurn MP3 has only one problem, that I don't agree with: the user must choose a file type to be burned. If you record an mp3 file that is not compatible with your CD, that will result in an error, and you will be forced to record the file again. This project is suitable for people who want to

The same can be said about Pat Riley and Pat Riley. And, according to Mike D'Antoni, neither have ever been formally contacted by the Heat or anyone else about becoming their coach. So, why not? D'Antoni, and the rest of the league, can only speculate. Only Riley has asked. D'Antoni, the Suns' first-year coach who has always deferred to his star point guard in Phoenix, was planning to interview with Pat Riley in Los Angeles. But the two talked first. "We talked before I came in," D'Antoni said Thursday. "And I guess Pat came to me on his own, because I know he knew about it. He was the one that told me about it, and he's the one that recommended me to come down and speak to Pat." At the time, D'Antoni didn't know much more than Riley did. He hadn't talked to the Heat, hadn't spoken to Pat, hadn't spoken to Mike, the NBA's most powerful executive. It was a long weekend, and they met at the Los Angeles Hyatt. But before they did anything else, they talked. Both had questions for each other. They explored what might be possible. "We talked about what Pat was looking for," D'Antoni said. "If Pat wasn't looking for something, why would he ask me to come down here? He asked what I thought I could bring. And he told me he didn't want the same thing Pat was looking for. So that
