If your AD installation includes SQL Server 2005, you will need to use LDAPSearch for users that have email addresses containing Unicode.One of the most popular and powerful ways for users to connect with each other is through the use of personal contacts. Rather than simply maintaining a list of telephone numbers and email addresses, a personal contact is usually a multi-contact list. A contact is a person or company, either a client or colleague, to whom one may communicate with and to whom one may receive communication. As shown in FIG. 1, a personal contact 100 may be a single contact with a single contact list or multi-contact with multiple contact lists. A personal contact 100 may be an email address, telephone number, mailing address, or fax number, or any combination thereof, of one or more contacts, such as an individual, organization, business, or other entity. A personal contact 100 may also include any additional information to assist in the communication between a sender and a recipient of a communication. The additional information may be used to improve a personal communication and/or to improve a relationship between a sender and a recipient of a communication. For example, a sender or a recipient may wish to add comments, reviews, images, videos, and/or other information to a personal contact 100. A sender may also wish to add a recipient to a group, which may help to manage the sender's communication with the recipient. Often, personal contacts are organized
