CollectyCut lets you study, process and organize a lot of quotations. When reading a blog, article or other text, you often find yourself dealing with dozens of quotes. Some of them are related to the particular topic of the text, while others give you an opportunity to pause for a moment, or even to think of something. But later you find out that the sheet of paper was thrown away by the office-cleaner, the sticker fell off the monitor a year ago and the IDEAS file is overfilled with ideas so it is impossible to find links to the topic you are interested in `_now_`. This is where CollectyCut comes in. You just need to drag the necessary tag to the search area, and the software will find all the quotations that have the same tag. You can drag the quotations to a special file where you can process and organize them later, or you can just leave them in the software's window and study or organize them as you prefer. Furthermore, CollectyCut can keep track of the quotations you have marked in the IDEAS file, so, when you come back to this file at some later time, you don't have to start from the beginning. You can see, who marked the quotations already and where you left them. Moreover, you can check your quotations' tags, and even modify them, while you are working with the software. The problem of having a lot of quotations and not knowing where to find them is solved by the "Select-All"-feature. You just need to select all the quotations by clicking on the big box in the upper-left corner, and the software will display all the found quotations. You can also limit the search for quotations to a particular tag, by entering it in the corresponding field, or to a particular date, by entering the relevant date. CollectyCut's two-side design allows you to view the quotations in a way you prefer. If you prefer to have your quotations displayed in a vertical way, you just need to click on the `__View-Mode__` button in the toolbar. There are also two major views. In the first one, your quotations are displayed in a list. To view the text properly, you need to click on the word "Select" to make it display the quotation in a text-box. In the second view, you can click on the quotation to view its text. Furthermore, you can export the HTML version of the quotations, which is especially

TURBO KNIGHTS It is recommended that you use DirectX 9 or higher (version 5.0 or higher) and a video card capable of supporting at least shader model 2.0. GeForce 6 series and above are fully supported. Please note that all DX9 compatible systems should support shader model 3.0, which is required to run the Gecko Engine.

However, if you are using non-DX9 capable systems, we recommend that you first upgrade to DX9 then upgrade to the Gecko Engine. From there
