I have a table with two columns one is employeeId which is auto increment. Another one is status. This column has a value of "Pending" or "Approved" or "Rejected". In this table I have records for both status as well as many more records for "Pending". I want only one record which has the latest "status" and get all of the others out of this one. So the expected output is : EmpID Status 1 Rejected 2 Approved I have tried this query: select EmpID,status from table1 where status= 'Rejected' order by EmpID desc This does only give me the latest record but it does not filter out the others records. If anyone could suggest a way to do it or show me how to do it that would be great. A: This will select the latest record by employee id, and will output all other records in their original order: SELECT * FROM table1 WHERE status = 'Rejected' ORDER BY EmpID If you want to order records that have more than one 'Rejected', then add a GROUP BY statement in the query above. A:
