MyTenuis is an application that constantly monitors the hardware status of your PC. It will give you at a glance a detailed overview of what's happening right now and to what extent the system is overloaded or idle. MyTenuis is very easy to use. With just a click of the mouse, you will be able to see what's happening on your hard drive, your network and your battery state. Additionally, MyTenuis provides a clock, weather forecast and a calendar module. MyTenuis is also a very useful application if you want to keep a more detailed eye on the PC in real time.

It has excellent functionality to keep an eye on collection frequency and best is that you can generate a C# event handler, which will be called for every collection. Some of the graphs are a bit overwhelming, but you can easily switch to simple statistics to see what's going on. A: I'd suggest using the Visual Studio Performance Tools 2010. They feature this
