I, like any other animal, creature, man, aspired to freedom. But like any other animal, creature, man, I am limited by the instinct of self-preservation and the instinct to reproduce. And only a man who is not limited by anything can become a magician. But for that man must be alone, must be lonely. And then he can concentrate on magic. But what can a magical being do in a world where everything magical has been destroyed? Nothing! Man is the only being in a world without magic. So, if a magician is a human being, there won't be one in our world. We will have to look for magic in another world. As strange as it sounds, everything in our world can disappear. Man is the only creature capable of creating more and more weapons, which means that everything in our world could disappear. If magic is what makes man human, it will not exist in our world. Ironically, everything we know about magic was created from ancient legends and fairy tales, which means it won't exist in our world. Yeah, even if there is, it would probably look like this... All I know about magic is that it is a product of our thoughts and desires. And that's true! But it has other properties that people don't know about yet. I would like to tell you about some of them. But if I were to think of all them, it would be not an article, but a story. Therefore, I will limit myself to just a couple. I am not claiming that magical healing is a myth or fiction. But that does not mean that it is a panacea for all diseases, much less that it cannot be administered by people who are not magical. Otherwise, we wouldn't suffer from so-called mutations and other genetic abnormalities. But, at the moment, most people engaged in healing simply don't have the ability to influence biological materials. And it's not always due to lack of desire or talent. It's a lack of information. And if the target magicians were only used in the most hopeless cases. it's become known that there's an alternative to surgery. It's is the ability to heal the disease. And we know how to do it. - What about other diseases? - Other diseases are not as complicated. Those diseases we can deal with, too. I know a healer who was able to cure Alzheimer's. Your father never had Alzheimer's. never had it. - Did he have any other illnesses? - He did. But there was no cure for them. They had to be to work with. I would have done it myself, but I wasn't but I wasn't in Moscow or Leningrad, or in Riga. And without me, there was nothing to be done. without me. - And how did you know what to do? to do? - It's very simple. I, like a lot of people... I, like many others, have been studying the peculiarities of Russian and Soviet man, but from from a different point of view. I was interested the economic side of the question. ð I came to the conclusion that it was necessary to study and and control everything that has to do economics. And as far as the the human factor, it can be evaluate. In order to assess this factor it is necessary to investigate Factors influencing the occurrence of errors in the process (Fig.2). Figure 2 - Factors affecting the occurrence of errors Errors can have different causes. They are caused by human error, technical errors, or exceeding of normative values of parameters. So The investigation of these factors will make it possible to determine the causes of the errors. To do this, it is necessary to identify the types of errors, define appropriate types of activities, as well as types of actions in according to the learning objectives. This process can be based on the design phase of the learning process. This should ensure the implementation of the didactic principles of science, accessibility and systematicity, orientation, consciousness and activity, etc. 2. For this purpose, it is necessary to develop the technology of training, i.e. content and methods of its implementation. 3. For this it is necessary to choose the most effective for the given conditions, methods, techniques and ways of implementation learning activities.
