Gcompris-free-key.4 Top Ways to Prep Employees for an Online Shopping Boom If you're like most small businesses, you're betting big on e-commerce. As online shopping balloons into a pillar of the global economy, here are ways you can prepare your employees to best tap into that thriving online market. Whether you're a shipper like FedEx, a direct marketer like FreightWay or an e-tailer like The Container Store, you have to understand how to source from all of your e-commerce suppliers. Working with e-commerce vendors—like, say, online furniture and electronics stores—requires a certain level of expertise; not everyone is qualified to make shipments from China or a warehouse in New Jersey. We've been building custom e-commerce solutions for businesses just like yours. Take a peek at how our clients are incorporating e-commerce into their business operations. You've Got the Legwork From your login page to your checkout process, e-commerce is a whole new world—and your customers expect to see a consistent shopping experience online. Customers shouldn't have to adapt to your site, as they do to a different product: they should have seamless access to the goods they want. This is where a solid implementation strategy comes in handy. After all, building an e-commerce site is just one piece of the puzzle. You need to coordinate
