Further observations on immunological, and ultrastructural aspects of the digestive tract in the newt, Notophthalmus viridescens, using light and electron microscopy. The technique of serial sectioning was used for examining and comparing the ultrastructure of the digestive tract in the newt (Notophthalmus viridescens) with that in the toad. Within the stomach, the inner epithelium of the newt contains intensive cytoplasmic processes between the cells which are connected with the cytoplasm in the luminal layer of the epithelium (gland cells). Similar gland cells are also present in the toad. In the newt, surface mucous glands are present in the gastric glands of the stomach and more diffusely distributed around the gland. The glands of the newt are present in the stomach but are arranged like those of the toad at sites deeper in the organ. Other structural details of the newt stomach are compared with those of the toad. Ask HN: Google Hangouts suggests inviting others only if I have no avatar - aboodman I find this annoying because it's a long process and I often forget to tell people about it. When someone actually messages me, I'm able to reply quickly. Are there any existing solutions for getting around this?

===== dutchbrit I think that's mostly a timing thing.
If I want to have a conversation with someone, I don't want to invite my 13000 friends to a so called 'conversation', I want them to message me and we can start something with them. ~~~ aboodman That's what I thought but it seems to happen on both good days and bad. Also, it seems like it only happens in private hangouts, not in mixed public/ private or public hangouts. It's hard to keep track of who is in your "inner circle" and it's often not possible to find people with an email address. ----- veddox I believe that this is why it only happens when you have no avatar. If you do have an avatar, they must be able to identify you by that, which will result in far less suggested people. Another possibility might be that the latency makes people more willing to accept invitations than when you have a fast, reliable connection. -----

What's New in the Photoshop CS5?

Brushes that are used in Composition You can use a number of brushes to make your artwork more interesting and to make it easy to improve it later. The exact brushes you use depend on your work, and your artistic vision. Below are some of the most common brushes used in composition. Clone Stamp The Clone Stamp lets you re-create an area on an image. This can be useful for replacing an area of a photo or for repairing damaged areas, as well as allowing you to reduce a photo's size without losing quality or detail. How to use: 1. Click on the Clone Stamp tool. 2. Click on an area of the photo or canvas. 3. Click to select a new area to copy the effect from. You can also apply the same effect to different photos and layers at the same time. To create a clone, drag the cursor into the new area.

New Layer Brush

The New Layer Brush lets you add a layer, fill a layer with a color, or create other effects.

Adjustment Brush

The Adjustment Brush lets you create and manipulate colors, brightness, contrast, and saturation. The brush can be used in a variety of ways to change the look of an image. It can be used with one or more photos and layers to allow you to select the effect you want to apply to each layer, or on the canvas to change the overall look of an image. How to use: 1. Click on the Adjustment Brush tool. 2. Click on the area that you want to paint in. 3. Click to make a selection of the area you want to adjust. 4. Click and drag to paint a new area. Brush Tip Shape The Brush Tip Shape lets you change the shape of the brush. In some cases, you may find it easier to change the shape of your brush by creating a new brush. How to use: 1. Click on the Brush Tip Shape tool. 2. Click to select the shape you want to use. 3. Click to make another shape selection. Color

Selector The Color Selector lets you pick a color by clicking on any area of the canvas or photo to select a color from any selected color, or you can use any of the Hue, Saturation, and Lightness sliders to change the color. How to use: 1. Click on the Color Selector tool. 2. Click anywhere in the photo
