License Key For Long Path ToolrarA 24-year-old Des Moines woman is in custody after she allegedly gave her baby a Percocet and marijuana laced with THC. Police said the woman smoked some marijuana with her son earlier that day when she went to sleep, and he later bit her nose when she woke up. Police said the mother became frustrated when she realized the baby was awake and may have gotten into more of her marijuana. She reportedly gave him a Percocet and told police she smoked some more marijuana. Officers said they found the baby had more than one-gram of THC in his system. They also said the baby had some prescription medication in his system, but that it was legal. The mother told police she used some of the marijuana earlier in the day and that she was using THC or marijuana to treat migraines. She told police her plan was to give the baby a shot of hydrocodone and THC in a beverage to settle his cough. She said she got the prescription for the THC with the medicine cabinet door open. The baby was taken to the hospital and was given a clean bill of health. Development of communication skills in family medicine resident trainees. This study aimed to assess the development of communication skills in family medicine (FM) resident trainees by comparing a first-year (GY) resident with a senior resident (SR) in a family medicine teaching program. Communication skills were assessed before (T1), after (T2), and 2 weeks after (T3) the 2 residents participated in teaching at a Health Maintenance Organization clinic. Two student raters evaluated residents (2 GYs and 1 SR) for communication skills during structured clinical encounters. The following measures were administered: the North American Primary Care Residency In-training Examination (US) and the Family Medicine In-training Examination-Japan (FMiTE). The FMiTE was administered to assess competency in clinical skills. The resident's self-assessments of communication skills were also administered. Student raters considered that the SR had more coherent and specific communication skills than the GY, which might be attributed to the senior resident having greater experience than the first year resident. The
