A compound class which has become very important is a group of substances called cyclopropylpyrimidines. Pregnancy and the newborn infant are particularly susceptible to adverse effects of cyclopropylpyrimidine insecticides and teratogens. It is now known that cyclopropylpyrimidines are known to be carcinogenic to the testes and other organs in mice and rats. Thus, this group of compounds has been reported to cause birth defects, teratogenicity and carcinogenicity. However, not all cyclopropylpyrimidines are carcinogenic and there are a number of cyclopropylpyrimidines which are not known to cause these health problems. For example, tetrachlorvinphos is a cyclopropylpyrimidine which is not known to cause birth defects, teratogenicity or carcinogenicity. Thus, a need exists for more versatile, safer and more efficient systems for the production and safe delivery of cyclopropylpyrimidines.Q: Using the Traveller Character Sheet? I'm currently using the basic character sheet for the 2E Traveller Revised setting. How does this compare to the advanced character sheet available here: I am using 2E, but am also curious about the later editions as well. A: The "advanced" sheets are almost entirely different. The basic sheet is fine for a 2E game. I don't see what would be gained by getting the advanced sheets. You can either spend a couple of dollars on
