In Photoshop, the layers are the equivalent of the layers of paint. You can have as many layers as you want, and each one has a different color. To enable you to do your own version of this, here's how to make a layered image: 1. Open a new image file in Photoshop. 2. Click the new layer icon on the Layers panel (or press CTRL+N to create a new layer, as shown in Figure 6-1 ). 3. Click inside your image and paint a color. You can use the Eyedropper tool or your own brush, using any color you want, as shown in Figure 6-1. 4. Reveal the other layers by clicking the eye icon next to the layer name (like the one in the second group in Figure 6-1 ). Figure 6-1: This image uses a few layers to create an interesting effect. | --- | --- 5. Using the Move tool, move the paint color to another part of the image
