"Those who would give up essential Liberty to purchase a little temporary Safety, deserve neither Liberty nor Safety." -Benjamin Franklin Welcome to music notes, I am Professor Elwood Brand. These notes are designed to be a basic introduction to music for a beginning class, and one that can be taught in either classroom or chamber music hall, or at home. I try to explain the basics, the central features of the instrument, and its place in Western music. So, if you're just entering the world of music, you want to listen to and practice your ear, and learn the rudiments of music notation, how to read the notes on the page, understand the music as you hear it, and all of its implications for you and your life. There's a brief introduction of the history of music, the main issues and debates, and the history of the Western music tradition. This is the history of music as I teach it, and how it relates to today. I found it all very interesting. I really enjoyed my professional music career, and want to share some of what I've learned. I hope to turn you on to the life of music, and start a personal and pleasant relationship with it. These notes are created to help with your training and education in the fundamentals of music. You can begin listening now to the 48-page index of all the books I've used for the learning of music, and compare them with those you're currently using to learn. This is a great tool, so save it. And be patient, as this is the heart
