“In FIFA 20, we introduced two new control modes: 1) ‘Natural Player Controls’ and 2) ‘In-Situ Controls,’” said John Chen, Executive Producer for FIFA. “We tested both of these modes extensively before making a decision on the gameplay features most pertinent to our fans and players. The new ‘HyperMotion Technology’ is an important addition to our ‘Natural Player Controls’ gameplay, which is the most realistic in the FIFA series. We’ve been working on this feature for a long time, and it was time for it to come to fruition.” FIFA’s new “HyperMotion” technology has evolved from a concept to a technology that can be used in any play mode at any difficulty level. The result is a fully responsive, more authentic and realistic system that allows for deeper and more fluid gameplay, including a brand-new Player Trajectory system. The change to “HyperMotion” is also something fans can see instantly when they play FIFA 20. “The success of our Natural Player Controls mode in FIFA 20 was driven by hard data,” said Matt Prior, Director of Player Development at EA SPORTS. “In the development process, it was clear that this mode was viable in the long term and would offer stability, which is what we needed to appeal to our players. As we continued to iterate on Natural Player Controls, it was our goal to take advantage of the new data and introduce technologies to move things forward even further.

That's how the new 'HyperMotion' technology was conceived." Through the new Player Trajectory system, players can more realistically use their bodies to move across the pitch, augment the ball's flight and deceive their opponents, all without the need to cheat like before. It creates more opportunities for players to control the ball and improve their skill and control. New post-tackle animations encourage players to roll after receiving the ball and tuck possession, providing more strategic options for defenders. Players will now more clearly demonstrate the intention behind their actions, making clear and impactful choices, which makes gameplay more believable and complete. While playing in the "Natural Player Controls" mode, the players' skill and control will be heavily affected by their movements. Through the new Player Trajectory system, when a player makes a move to evade an opponent

21, was released on December 27, 2015. In June 2017, EA announced that they had sold more than 1.5 billion FIFA games since the release of FIFA 15. Gameplay FIFA, FIFA 14 and FIFA 15 use FIFA's "New Generation Engine". It is a game engine developed specifically for the game FIFA. It is not to be confused with the "FIFA Entertainment Game Engine" used in previous games. The New Generation Engine was designed with the video game FIFA by EA Sports. All versions of the game can be played through a single-player career mode, a "Team" mode, and three kinds of FIFA Ultimate Team modes: FIFA Ultimate Team™, FIFA Ultimate Team Champions, and FIFA Ultimate Team Legends. In "Team", "Be a Pro", and "Celebrity Pro" modes, players take on the roles of a player from real sports teams in order to become a well-known football player. FIFA Ultimate Team allows players to collect a team of real football players and use them in real-life matches. Spin & Score Spin & Score is a live online and offline multiplayer mode for FIFA multiplayer, which was introduced in FIFA 13. The objective is for players to score as many goals as possible within a pre-specified time period.
