OrgCourier for Workgroup is a program that enables you to manage all available delivery services as well as the courier agents and their assignments for the next 30 days in an efficient manner. For the avoidance of doubt, none of the above information is sought to be a recommendation that any course of action, or indeed any investment strategy, should be pursued. The past is a blue book, future results are not guaranteed and the opinions expressed in this publication do not necessarily reflect those of the publisher, and should not be considered as advice. "Real-time" is a term that has come to signify many things in many contexts. A web log is usually updated "live" but there are many other contexts in which a "real-time" service is an important concept. Real-time logic is needed to make sure that you can control not only motors, lights and other instruments, but also the behavior of your car, bike, boat or aircraft, by using CNC (Computer Numerical Control) technology. Real-time software is used for transmitting very important messages that must be delivered safely to their destination. Messages sent by e-mail can be delayed: we all know how often we try to send an important e-mail, but never send it until the next morning. Imagine if the message did not arrive until the next day. In finance, real-time is important, because it represents orders that must be processed and transactions that must be finished to complete and settle an account for any day. In gaming, real-time is also an important consideration, because the experience of a game is more "realistic" if the computer is telling you about all the actions it is taking to implement the game. In the field of databases, real-time logic must allow the retrieval of information from the database without delaying. If, for example, you know that a record has been created in the database, you can ask the database for a record that has been updated since you last looked at the record. (While the database is processing this request, you will no longer be able to view the original record. When it finishes processing, the database will return it to the client.) You use real-time database technology to create real-time applications. An application using real-time database technology can make a change to the database, perform calculations, and immediately send back the results. There are many examples of applications using real-time database technology: internet trading

As a delivery company, it goes without saying that the success of your business ultimately depends making sure that the ordered goods get to the proper recipient in a timely manner. Not only do you need an efficient tool to monitor the parcels, but you also require a solution that enables you to alert the buyers and sellers when their products reach the destination. Comes with an outdated, yet customizable interface Even though it is unpolished and old-school, the GUI is well-structured and enables you to customize the view in a way that simplifies how you find customers, orders and tasks. Moreover, you can assign as many couriers as your company uses and configure a color code for each employee, for easier tracking and monitoring. Even though it is very similar to OrgCourier, it is important to note that the application comes with additional features that allow you to share data over the network in real-time. In fact, you can synchronize the tasks and event with ones in Microsoft Outlook and iCalendar. Alternatively, you can export the database to Excel, HTML, XML or TXT. Manage customers and orders from the same database The highlight of the application comes from the fact that it allows you to administer all aspects associated with the delivery business from the same database. In addition to the delivery assignments, the program enables you to keep track of the status of the tasks your staff is taking care of. You should know that creating a new event is a straightforward process that entails adding the start and end-timers along with the customers' details. Thanks to the hour-by-hour breakdown display, you can be sure you are always updated and can pinpoint the courier responsible for the delivery. Then again, you should know that there is no way to verify whether the data introduced is correct or not. If you are looking for a solution to manage all your deliveries, then you have come to the right place. OrgCourier for Workgroup is an old school software that comes with a cracked interface. Since it is very similar to OrgCourier, you will find that the data you have is for a third-party website. It allows you to track the tasks of the courier, the carriers and the assignments for the next 30 days in real-time. To start things off, you will need to create an admin account. You can then be moved to the main menu where you will be able to locate the features of the application. Moreover, you can add as many carriers and tasks as you need along with the customers information. The time frame can be configured as you go along. Finally, you will be able to verify the order details in the order history where you can also view the notes provided by the customers. As mentioned before, the creation of tasks is very simple. Simply provide the start time, end time, courier, site as well as the notes that the customer provided. We will update the review once we give more feedback, Is it possible to export the data to a database and use it in another product (e.g. MSWord)? Unfortunately, the data is not exported to a database. It is only useful for organizing tasks. What is this software's license like? The license is $20, and I believe that is non-exclusive for life. These features are configurable in the settings menu Yes, however, there is no method to determine whether the data entered is correct or not. Will this software work with my current version of OrgCourier? There are good chances that the data will not work. We are working on a fix for that, but it may not be available until the next update. This software replaces the delivery notifications that are displayed in OrgCourier. The interface of OrgCourier for Workgroup is similar to that of OrgCourier.
