The ventral cystocele and enterocoele are sacs that protrude into the rectum and are often associated with rectal prolapse (RP). On magnetic resonance imaging (MRI), both sacs may appear as an oval hypointense structure adjacent to the rectum. While the dorsal cystocele (DC) typically contains mucinous material and only a few connective tissue fibers, the connective tissue content increases with the size of the DC. The purpose of this study is to determine whether the increased connective tissue in the DC of a patient with RP is also a result of RP or due to a separate pathology. We included 106 patients with RP and 25 control women. The MRI protocol included T2-weighted turbo spin-echo sequences and T1-weighted fat-suppressed sequences. A DC was present on MRI in 24 patients (22.6%) with RP and in 0 controls. The percentage of connective tissue in the DC was determined. All control women had a normal-sized vagina and neither had RP. The connective tissue percentage was higher in the normal-sized vagina (median, 33; range, 10-68) than in the DC (median, 2.5; range, 0-44) (P =.012). The difference between groups was not significant (P =.062) when comparing the connective tissue percentage in the DC to the mean percentage of the control vagina. The presence of RP was not related to the connective tissue percentage in the DC or the presence of a DC. Other pathologies

FIFA is the world’s most popular sports video game, set in a variety of international football leagues and featuring over 800 official clubs. Since we launched FIFA on September 30, 1992, we’ve continually expanded the game to include more leagues, stadiums, players and gameplay modes. Now, in our flagship release, FIFA 22, we’ve added a wealth of new and enhanced features, visual fidelity and gameplay to bring you the best-ever version of the game. Introducing the FIFA Team Series Powered by Football™ In a scene reminiscent of a James Bond™ film, FIFA 22 introduces a new Team Series. This series adds a unique in-game experience as players join teams of legends past and present. When starting up FIFA, players will be asked to select a team to play for. Selecting a Team Series option during gameplay and over an authentic team uniform will see them join a team of the selected name. Once a Team Series is selected, players will also be given the opportunity to face off against previous captains of the selected series, including Pele, George Best, Luis Figo, Pavel Nedved, Ronaldo, Wayne Rooney and more. Authentic Player and Club Sound FIFA 22’s authentic character models bring the on-field action to life. Now available for the first time in the series, the new player and club sound features sync with the player models when an incoming ball is received or a long pass is made. Every player model features unique player-specific sounds, meaning that each player has his or her own unique abilities. Update to Explosive Zones The explosive zone system will be radically reworked for FIFA 22 to assist the player in more situations. New in FIFA, interactive blue lines will now be displayed in the field of play, highlighting areas of the field where the ball may be played. During gameplay, if the player passes the ball into these areas, an explosion in the surrounding environment will occur, encouraging the player to attempt and master passing over such difficult areas. Revamped user interface The new graphics, animations and user interface will bring the ultimate FIFA game experience. In addition to the new Team Series, Player and Club Sound features, the 3D stadiums will include a fully reworked user interface that will serve as a personal touch screen into the game. Players will now be able to put the game into a specific stadium and control gameplay directly from the pitch, overlaying real-time data
