“With the success of FIFA 21, we have continued to further advance our motion capture technology and introduce new tools to FIFA players,” said Richard Hillebrand, Senior Studio Director, FIFA. “We are absolutely thrilled to be able to finally share with fans a long-awaited feature that fans have been asking for: football motion capture. Our engine is now enabled to account for all the movements of players in real-time, meaning all our players move in an accurate and smooth way when on the pitch.” At first glance, the new player models seem even more authentic than last year’s game. Players wear their own game boots, their face and body shape has more realistic nuances. “With FIFA 21 we saw many technical improvements in the game engine,” says Colin Buckley, Senior Graphics Designer, EA SPORTS. “The engine has now been upgraded to utilize the latest in real-time physics technology to ensure new features such as “Set Piece Motion” and “HyperMotion” technology can take players to new heights of realism. The addition of “HyperMotion” technology allows players to have natural body control and movement during full game situations. All the team mates see the movement of players like they are real players on the field. This combination of new physics and real-world player movement delivers the most accurate and realistic game experience.” “We are thrilled to add motion capture and HyperMotion to FIFA 22,” says Matt Bilbey, Senior Producer, FIFA. “The technology adds
