When trying to install some application with yay, like for instance vlc, I get this error message: yay could not install package vlc I checked whether vlc-nox is installed: # yay -l | grep vlc-nox and it's not. But the package is marked as an AUR package: # yay -g --pkgs=vnc-nox vnc-nox: AUR A: No, you don't have to install all the AUR packages yourself, yay just automatically recommends them. If you want to install the recommended package, you can run the command yay -k install and this is all the information you need, while install is the name of the package. If you don't want to install the recommendation, just run the command yay -k deselect This will deselect the recommendation. Effect of a negative fluid balance on clinically detectable facial flushing and sweating response to postural challenge. This research investigated the physiological basis of the putative "sickness response" to bed rest. According to the traditional view, sweating is induced by increased secretion of vasodilator adrenomedullin. In contrast, an alternative model involves hydration-induced vasodilation, which may trigger fluid redistribution to the skin rather than sweating. We studied 9 healthy volunteers who underwent 4 experimental days in a normovolemic state (baseline), during a 2-day period of significant fluid loss (45% reduction), and during a 2-day period of euvoemia. We also measured the speed of flushing and sweating responses to a 30-second, 5-degree head-up tilt
