Forty-one patients with idiopathic portal hypertension had clinical, hematologic, and biochemical parameters evaluated. The mean bilirubin level, determined percutaneously, was 11.5 mg/dl. The Child's classification of the severity of the disease was mild in 19 patients, moderate in eight, and severe in 14. Laboratory evaluations revealed a mild hyperbilirubinemia, leukocytosis, and elevation of the serum alkaline phosphatase level in all patients. Both the Child-Pugh classification and the New York Heart Association functional classification showed no difference between the mild and moderate forms of idiopathic portal hypertension. Twenty-two patients had a pancreatic functional study. The prevalence of pancreatic insufficiency in these patients was significantly higher than in healthy controls (21% and 15%, respectively;  $P = 0.04$ ). The prevalence of pancreatic insufficiency was associated with the severity of portal hypertension ( $P = 0.003$ ), but not to the Child-Pugh classification. Twenty-two patients underwent a biopsy of the small bowel and of the liver. The small-bowel mucosa showed duodenitis and villous atrophy, with an overrepresentation of Paneth cells. A comparison of two approaches to the introduction of a shared governance model in a health maintenance organization. The introduction of a shared governance model within a health maintenance
