The Saccharomyces cerevisiae LEU2 gene has been isolated and the nucleotide sequence determined. Its expression is controlled by the methionine- and leucine-regulatory signals of the MET16, MET3 and MET22 genes. A 2.4 kb PstI-EcoRI fragment that contains LEU2+ transcription units has been cloned into plasmid pBR322. This fragment directs a leucine-specific methionine-dependent transcription when in the correct orientation within the plasmid. The 4.8 kb Leu2+ transcript produced by the cloned LEU2 gene has a 5' cap. The LEU2+ RNA isolated from leucine-grown cells is resistant to RNase A digestion, but sensitive to digestion by alkali, suggesting the presence of a protein associated with the LEU2-specific RNAs. A LEU2-immunoblot (immunoblot) has been prepared with antibody produced in rabbits that was raised to the LEU2 protein. This LEU2-immunoblot identified a single protein band, M(r) = 65,000. Following chemical cross-linking of cell extracts, a LEU2-protein band of M(r) = 75,000 was demonstrated by a LEU2-immunoblot. These results suggest that the LEU2 RNA is associated with a protein that has a molecular weight of 65,000.
