As you're likely to find in any tutorial, the following advice is offered: Make sure you have a digital camera or scanner to start with and don't take photos until after you have created your template. Create an image on your computer that will become the basis of your template before you print it out. You should print the template as a landscape orientation, which is the orientation used by scanners to read images. Create a template of your chosen subject on a sturdy flat surface with a generous amount of paper on the background. To create the template, use a marker to outline the image on a large piece of paper and then scan the image. With your image selected, choose Window | Image | Image Size and then choose the resolution and image quality best for your work. Some settings are for printing purposes. For example, if you will be designing a black-and-white photograph, you can choose a 300 dpi and 300 dpi image quality setting. If you will be designing a complex image, consider using a 1200 dpi or higher setting. You can also set the number of colors in your image by choosing from the drop-down menu Color Mode. When the image is finished and you want to print it, go to the Print dialog and choose what you want to do with the image. For example, if you will be using a glossy photo finish, choose Glossy. The New Layer Effect allows you to create a new layer in an image, which is pretty much like having an extra canvas on which you can paint and draw. This is useful for drawing logos, patterns, and other designs. The Pen tool allows you to draw with a stroke, color, and a firm width. This can be used for creating simple text as well as cartoon-like designs. The Gradient tool allows you to fill a section of an image with a colour gradient. It's useful for creating smooth colour transitions and blending images. The Design and Adjust layers allow you to flatten an image or create a new layer within it and manipulate each layer, such as cropping, duplicating, and moving it on the canvas.

Q: How to add custom player, AppleLIVE/iLounge to blender export I'm running blender 2.65 and Blender 2.8b I'd like to export to AppleLIVE or iLounge format but can't find any information on how to do that. I've tried to create an empty node graph, inserted the iphone player, and then changed it to "AppleLIVE". There's no sound for a second or two and then I get the error message "Audio App crashed." I've been googling like crazy and using my AppleLIVE login info to no avail. If anyone has an idea on how to achieve this with a.blend file I'd be delighted. All I know is that it requires compressed audio files.

A: What format you want to use in that case is: AppleLIVE iLounge Since you don't have access to raw audio data, you can't just dump it as uncompressed PCM, because that only works when the file is premixed, and not for pieces. PCM is a complex bitstream that only plays in computers. iLounge is a complex bitstream that only plays in iDevices. AppleLIVE is a simple data format that plays everywhere.

Q: How can I sum the second line of values in an array- perl? I have a file that contains some values. The line I am interested in has the following values Fluke-Levens 10 Citation WN7 2 Citation WN7 2 . . . Citation WN7 2
