Now the question is, will there be an update? I'm not seeing anything on the site about a new one. Has anyone else been let down by 4A's relatively lousy attitude to updating? A: There is no further info on the site, but the game has been updated. The link to the patch in the new post works. It is part of patch 2.2 (see the detailed changelog there) - it is the same patch as on the official forum. In the past two years, the US has spent more than $1 billion on a program to create a nationwide ultrasound database for miscarriages. If the mother was taking drugs, her pregnancy might even have been aborted. And that's not all - ultrasound scanners can even detect food in the stomach, not to mention bone. "It's a bit like having a million radio-controlled spy drones flying around around your house looking at all your little secrets," notes Isaac "Ike"

McClean, developer of a robot that sneaks into people's homes and monitors them from the inside. "Not all of those secrets are good, and you've got to be very careful what you do in your own home. At this point, with the only thing keeping my life and death apart is the massive burden of legal liability on the manufacturer, there's not too much of a vested interest for me to spend all my time devoted to inventing ways of spying on you, and there's certainly not enough motivation for you to spend your time and money building defenses against them." Not so long ago, many of these technologies would have been wholly impossible. Or at least too high-tech for most of us to afford. Now, suddenly, you can pick up a smartphone, go to an Internet shopping website, make your purchase and receive it almost instantly - all without leaving your home. And it's not just your home that's being monitored - a localised network will watch you while you're out, too. Before you can buy something, you'll need to provide your photograph and details - and in some cases, your fingerprint, too. That may all be perfectly legitimate - but once that is sent away from your home, it may be difficult to control what happens to it. Your image may be sold to marketing companies. Your personal details may be passed to banks or credit card companies. The only way to be sure is to keep
