Canon PowerShot S95 Have you ever struggled with how to sharpen up a photo? But, don't worry, there's an app out there that can help you. We have put together a list of the five best apps to sharpen your photos, TOP 5 Photo Editing Apps Shazam – Using your phone camera to detect music Processing – An open source photo editor for photographers Square – Have a stock image you'd like to use? Compose It! – Have images on a canvas? Shazam is one of the best apps out there to help you decide if you have found the song you were looking for. You can also set it to auto-tag all videos that you shoot with your phone. Shazam.com Shazam.com Shazam.com Shazam.com Shazam.com Shazam.com YouTube – Catch music videos on the spot YouTube makes finding the right music video easy. You can tap or click the screen, and a pop-up will show you what music you are hearing. Shazam has made it easier to find music videos by using its own technology. YouTube.com YouTube.com YouTube.com YouTube.com YouTube.com YouTube.com If you own a music player app, like Spotify or Google Play Music, you may not need an app for Shazam. Because of this, Shazam is a free app and it should download in the app store on your phone. Spotify Spotify Spotify Spotify Spotify Google Play Music Google Play Music Google Play Music Google Play Music Google Play Music Regardless of how you get your music or videos, Shazam has some useful tools. Spotify has filters that you can use to make your own music for your videos. Once you are in the app, click on the name of the music you hear. Then, Shazam will show you the name of the band and music video or song playing. The app will usually show you the artist name at the end, for example, if an artist is The Carpenters, the song will usually be just "Carpenter" in 05a79cecff

In situ intercalation of lithium at the Zn-Au alloy system and its electrochemical behaviours in a 1 M LiPF6-based electrolyte. Phase-pure Zn-Au alloys are synthesized by a chemical co-precipitation method. The large electrochemical potential window of the Zn-Au alloy and the strong affinity for Li between Zn and Au elements make the Zn-Au alloy an excellent candidate as an anode material for rechargeable Li-ion batteries. Characterization of the as-prepared Zn-Au alloy indicates that it has low crystallinity. The as-prepared Zn-Au alloy delivers a reversible capacity of 89 mA h g(-1) after the first 10 cycles at a current density of 100 mA g(-1). After cycling over 400 times at 100 mA g(-1), the as-prepared Zn-Au alloy electrode still shows more than 50 mA h g(-1) reversible capacity. The in situ intercalation of lithium into the Zn-Au alloy can be confirmed by ex situ X-ray diffraction and ex situ scanning electron microscopy. The Zn-Au alloy electrodes with different intercalated Li states can be distinguished by ex situ X-ray diffraction and ex situ scanning electron microscopy. These results confirm the in situ intercalation of Li into the Zn-Au alloy. The electrochemical behaviour of the Li-intercalated Zn-Au alloy is similar to that of the conventional LiCoO(2) cathode. Hydrophilic poly(N-isopropylacrylamide) microgels functionalized with anionic aminoacids and peptides: Solubility and anion exchange properties. Poly(N-isopropylacrylamide) microgels were functionalized using N-isopropylacrylamide and methacrylic acid. The resulting particles were modified in a two-step reaction: (i) reaction of methacrylic acid with a primary amine on the surface; (ii) reaction of the acid groups with an amino-group containing tetrapeptide or aminoacid. The properties of the resulting particles were investigated by dynamic light scattering, zeta potential, X-ray photon spectroscopy and nuclear magnetic resonance spectroscopy. The critical micellar concentrations of the particles are 1.4 μM for [Subarachnoid anesthesia with rapid onset and recovery;a technique of choice for Caesarean section?]. The main criteria for selection of spinal anaesthesia for Caesarean section are rapid onset and recovery, with minimal haemodynamic alterations during delivery and immediate postoperative period. The most commonly used anaesthetic techniques are Epidural, Combined epidural-spinal (CE) and Spinal. CE is more suitable for elective Caesarean section as it provides better haemodynamic stability, and the amniotic fluid pool ensures an adequate spread of the local anaesthetic. For emergency or high-risk cases CE-spinal is a good alternative. The design of the anaesthetic preparation includes the micrograms of morphine added to the spinal fluid to achieve a haemodynamic stability, the characteristics of the anaesthetic-spinal fluid (pH, glucose) and the dose of anaesthetic agents. The use of sedoanalgesia and non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs reduces the requirement of analgesics, which reduces the systemic and local complication rate.I am especially aware that this cost must be borne by the taxpayers who must continue to supply water to their hilled neighbours and who have to contend with the taxes of an urbanized population. [Emphasis added.] It is therefore proposed that municipalities be granted the authority to levy a user charge in relation to the quantity of water used by commercial consumers for agricultural purposes. Municipal charges are already imposed upon the quantity of water taken from rivers to serve domestic users. However, the objectives of the present Bill are to develop a scheme whereby the costs of providing water to urban, industrial and agricultural sectors can be fairly distributed throughout the community on the basis of need. I am pleased to inform the House that this cost of providing water should be borne by the users who will use the water. This is in line with the objectives of the present Bill to "fairly distribute the costs of providing water services throughout the community". [Emphasis added.] If a town or municipality opts for the cost recovery scheme, there will be a detailed design and analysis process that will identify potential impacts. This will consider the following items, among others: (a) The impact on rates; (b) The availability of and access to a range of supply options; (
