gastric cancer]. A case of antro-pyloric type of gastric cancer was reported. The patient was a 71-year-old woman complaining of epigastralgia and hematemesis, and was found to have a type 1 gastric cancer at the antrum and pylorus on endoscopic examination. CT showed a 50-mm thick and soft lesion at the pylorus which was diagnosed as a submucosal tumor. Some weeks later, the lesion progressed. The antrum was resected and the pylorus was replaced. Pathological examination revealed a type 1 gastric cancer, and the mucosa was invasive into the muscle layer. We first diagnosed this tumor as a submucosal tumor. The lesion was located in a place different from the usual point of distribution of gastric cancer. The poor response to preoperative therapy, the disseminated pattern of tumor, and the rapid progression of the tumor suggested that the tumor was a sign of recurrence from a gastric cancer.ACU's Gasser picked as PSU Big East Coach of the Year WESTMINSTER, Md. - Atlantic Coast Conference Coaches Association (ACCCA) President Mike Bobinski has selected Laing Gasser, head coach of the University of Pittsburgh's men's basketball team, as the conference's Coach of the Year. Gasser, in his 13th season
