As reproduction management information, title information about a title and so on is recorded in the reproduction management area on a disc. The title information includes a title number (ID) indicating a content of a title, a reproduction start time, reproduction end time and the like. The title information is managed on the basis of a title. A title number is assigned uniquely to a content of a title, and this information is managed on the basis of the title. For example, a reproduction management area is prepared in the area shown in FIG. 3. The size of the reproduction management area is represented by the area A. Management information about a title such as a title number (i.e., ID) and a start time of reproduction is recorded in the area A. When reproduction of a disc such as a DVD, a blue ray disk or the like is performed, an optical pickup is first moved to the reproduction management area on the disc surface and the management information is read. Next, information indicating whether the title information is to be read out is read out. In this case, the following cases are considered. (1) In the case where title information is not recorded in the reproduction management area, the reading is not executed. (2) In the case where the title information is recorded, the reading is executed only in the case where the information to read out the title information is read out in the reading. (3) In the case where a title is recorded in the reproduction management area, the reading is executed in the case where a title number corresponding to the title in question is read out. candidate HLA-DR alpha-chain-independent p16INK4 cell cycle inhibitor. Annexin A2 (Anxa2) is a phospholipid-binding protein that can mediate the effects of inflammatory cytokines in epithelial cells. We found that Anxa2 caused dose-dependent cyclin-dependent kinase (CDK) inhibitors p16INK4 and p21Cip1 to be induced in immortalized keratinocyte (HaCaT) and primary human keratinocytes (HPK) cell lines. Experiments were also carried out with human primary fibroblasts and human embryonic kidney 293 cells, and we found little induction of p16INK4 and p21Cip1 in these cells. Further analysis of the mechanisms of Anxa2-induced cell cycle arrest indicated that Anxa2 was able to abrogate the growth-promoting effects of EGF and to inhibit growth-promoting and proliferating signals mediated by EGF and transforming growth factor-beta. These results indicate that Anxa2 is an integral part of the cell cycle machinery and acts as an upstream inhibitor of growth-promoting signals.The present invention generally relates to multiple-input-multiple-output (MIMO) systems, and more specifically to achieving higher order MIMO transmissions using a lesser number of antenna elements than would otherwise be required. A MIMO system can employ N transmit antennas (NTAN), and N receive antennas (NRAN). In this system, N! different links are provided between the NRAN and NTAN. Each of the NRAN and NTAN can be a physical antenna, a virtual antenna, a beam antenna, a phased antenna array, a smart antenna, or a switch antenna, for example. In some cases, the NRAN and NTAN can be active antennas. Furthermore, the NRAN and
