The vast majority of what you'll see on the Internet, however, is graphics from ordinary Web sites, newsletters, and other things that are created in other graphics programs. On the Web, Photoshop is often the tool of choice for creating graphics for the Internet, because it allows creation of high-resolution images for the Web. On a Macintosh, Photoshop CS6 is available for download from the Adobe Creative Cloud at a cost of $6.99 a month. Photoshop CS6 is also available for the Mac for the first time from Adobe's retail store at www.adobe.com/retail. Check out the following sections to find out about tools for drawing and painting, and Photoshop's most important filter features. Drawing tools Photoshop has more tools than you can shake a stick at. Some of them are obvious, such as brushes, pens, and markers, and other obscure tools like the use of extreme points that can alter the size of an image without changing the pixel count. Here are some of the most useful tools for drawing in Photoshop: Brush: You can draw with the Photoshop Brush, which comes with a handful of tools for drawing straight lines, curves, and textures, as shown in Figure 12-1. To use the Brush, choose Edit⇒Create⇒Brush, or choose Tools⇒Brush. Alternatively, you can set a Brush preset, enabling you to choose from a range of preset brushes. (See the "Brushes, pens, and markers" section, later in the chapter, to learn about brushes, pens, and markers.) The Brush lets you create more textured edges for your strokes than can be created with the Pen and Layer Styles tools. You can also create a variety of curves and textures by using the Brush with various stroke and fill tools. Pen: The Pen is a drawing tool that creates lines just as easily as the Brush creates curves. To use the Pen, choose Edit⇒Create⇒Pen, or choose Tools⇒Pen. Polygonal Lasso tool: The Polygonal Lasso tool is a freehand selection tool that you can use to draw shapes. You can then fine-tune the selection with the Brush tool. To use the Polygonal Lasso tool, choose Edit⇒Select⇒Lasso. Figure 12-1 shows the Polygonal Lasso another two weeks off to complete the goal. By the end of this season, though, you'll be ready to start incorporating your brand new glass into your lifestyle and schedule. As soon as this happens, you'll really notice the benefits that can be brought about by owning a pool, spa and hot tub. It's not just about enjoying the peace and quiet, but also about the social connections that can be made when staying at home all the time. It's great when you have the luxury of getting away with the rest of the family and friends, but there is one day where the spa and pool combo makes a lot of sense. The best times to use your spa and hot tub are when: You have guests coming over. You don't want to be stuck in the house all day and want to get out. You have a relaxing weekend. You have a meal out with friends. Hot tubs are great at getting rid of those annoying post-meal belly. We suggest two hours of soak-time, if you can do it. After your spa and hot tub day has finally come to an end, no matter how chilled or hot you feel, you'll sleep well because you got so much accomplished during your stay. For a more relaxing night, you can bake the crackers, ice the lemonade and keep the soft pretzels and pineapple slices in a glass container. The night before coming home, take the first one-hour drive of the trip, so you can start unwinding from your day. You can even make a list of things you'd like to do while you're there so you can work towards that goal. Your spa and hot tub can help you relax, even if only for an hour. You'll come back home feeling a little bit better, even if your workout routine wasn't quite as intense as you wanted it to be. How to Treat the Spa and Hot Tub This one-hour spa and hot tub day is great if you're trying to get that great feeling before you start your day. But it's even better when you use it after a long day. Spa and hot tubs are brilliant at letting you unwind and get the feeling back, even if you just need a quick decompression from
