To get started with Photoshop, you can download a free 14-day trial version at `www.adobe.com/products/photoshop.html`. Photoshop also includes other tools such as the following: Digital Imaging Edge: A free tutorial for beginners for Photoshop, Digital Imaging Edge offers an introduction to the program and provides instruction on using the tools. You can get a copy from `www.adobetutorialedge.com`. Dreamweaver: An Adobe application that allows you to create web pages. You can access it at `www.adobe.com/products/dreamweaver.html`. Dreamweaver works with some of Photoshop's tools. In fact, Dreamweaver includes an option to perform some Photoshop actions on web pages — two very similar products that work together. You can find out more about that at the aptly named `www.dreamweaver.com/products/ps_actions_and_websites.php`. Shopping for a Magic Wand The warty, irregular blob of color tools in the Layers panel — the ones that look like a cat's ear or a banana with a spiky stem — are the primary tools for manipulating and creating color. These tools are called "Wand tools," and you get three different types: the Magic Wand, the Pen, and the Brush. (For the most part, you use the Brush, but as you'll see in this section, the other two types of brushes and tools will also come in handy. In Figure 1-1, you see one of the Layers panel and the three types of Wand tools. Figure 1-1: The Layers panel offers the three types of Wand tools. The wand in the Layers panel, as shown in Figure 1-1, is the Magic Wand. When you select the Magic Wand tool, Photoshop displays the selection handles that you see in Figure 1-2. The Magic Wand is a great tool because it enables you to select an area of an image (or several areas) that are similar in color. If you move the wand along that area, it automatically selects all areas that it thinks are the same. Figure 1-2: The wand automatically selects similar-colored areas of your image. You can choose how the Magic Wand selects similar-colored areas — • You can select an area that's either very similar in color or very

Adobe Photoshop Elements contains many of the same tools as Photoshop. You can load and process images, adjust their brightness, contrast and colour, and even add effects, text, or web elements. This is the software version of Mac OS that allows you to install third-party apps and updates to software easily and securely. You can download this version of Photoshop Elements using the Mac App Store. Work with photos This section of the guide will explain how you can use Photoshop Elements to edit, make, and add effects to your photos. You'll see how to adjust the brightness and contrast of photos. You can also add text, special effects and other effects using Photoshop Elements. Load an image into Photoshop Elements Before you edit a photo, make sure you have a good digital photo of the object you want to work with. When you're ready to edit your photos, click the File menu, then Open. The Open screen lets you choose the location of the photo you want to work with. Click the Open button. When you open a photo in Photoshop Elements, the app displays the first section of your photo. You can also use the Zoom tool to easily zoom in or out on the photo to see more or less of it. All the images in this guide have been enhanced using Photoshop Elements so you can see how they might look using your editing software. The first section of your photo contains a few different options that let you play with the photo. The Look section in the top right-hand corner of the screen lets you view and adjust the look of your photo. This includes adjusting the brightness and contrast. You can also use the Highlight Correction tool. There's more about this feature later. The Adjustments section of the window lets you make changes to the entire photo. This includes adjusting the sharpness, adding effects, and cropping and rotating the photo. The Pen tool lets you add text, shapes and other objects to the photo. There are also some special tools in the Adjustments section. Bring in more photos If you want to add more photos to your photo, click the Add Layer button on the Layers panel. You can add many types of layers to your photo. Layers enable you to create different versions of your photo, making it easier for

The Best Gift For My Tattooed Boyfriend I spent Christmas in Hawaii and the whole time my boyfriend J (we'll call him J for the sake of his privacy, but don't be fooled: he's a nice guy) was there too. I was surprised when he asked me to send a card with a picture of myself, but he said he loved the gifts I had bought him. So I did. I knew what he liked so I got these things and stuck 'em all on Amazon. He gave me a big hug and said he loved me, and I'm pretty sure that's not always the case. Bethany Sonneborn I'm Bethany, a native Atlantan who got the traveling bug at 19 years old and lived for the next 12 years before relocating to sunny Austin, Texas. I've been a full-time travel blogger and photographer for the past three years. My love of wine, general hedonism, and the ocean led me to an associate's degree in Business of Tasting, my BA in English Literature, and my current MFA in Creative Writing. Travel in all its forms is what I'm passionate about. My two dogs, a Miniature Schnauzer named Pia and a Jack Russell Terrier named Charly. My name is Bethany Sonneborn, travel addict. I've been blogging about travel since 2009. I've visited more than 100 countries and claim to have an open passport. If you ask, you can read my travel journal here. And if you ask me, one thing I could always use is a shot of tequila.using System; using System.Collections.Generic; using System.Linq; using System.Text; using System.Threading.Tasks; using Xamarin.Forms; using Xamarin.Forms.Xaml; using PTC_Mobile_V2.Base; namespace PTC_Mobile_V2.Views.Login { [XamlCompilation(XamlCompilationOptions.Compile)] public partial class Login : ContentPage { public Login() {
