You can use Photoshop Elements to do many of the same things that you can do with Elements. This tutorial is how you can quickly and easily edit images, create new high-quality images, or both. In this tutorial, we will use a bird picture, image of a cat, and a closeup image. We will edit them to make them look more professional. Let's get started! Step 1: Open Photoshop Elements First, open Photoshop Elements. The easiest way to do this is to click on Photoshop Elements from your computer's Start menu and select Photoshop Elements. You can also download and install it on your computer from the Adobe website. If you just want to open an image, you can do that by clicking on the file from your hard drive. (Don't forget to backup your file before editing!) Step 2: Find the bird image Once you have opened the file, you will see the big bird image on the screen. To find the bird image, find it in the "Photos" folder on the left side of the screen. (Under the "Color" tab.) Open the image and double-click on it to edit it. Step 3: Find the image of the cat Once you are in the picture of the bird, click on "Tools" from the top bar. This will take you to the "Edit" tab. This tab has the tools for editing and manipulating images. Find and open the cat picture. Step 4: Apply adjustments to the image of the cat Now we will use the tools on the "Edit" tab to add some adjustments to the cat picture to make it look better. Click on the "Adjustments" tab. Make the following adjustments: Brightness/Contrast: Click on the icon in the color box at the top of the menu. This will open up the dialog box. Juvenile hormone (JH) is required for proper development in all insects. Its effects are mediated through the ecdysone receptor (EcR) and the product of its most immediate upstream gene, methoprene-tolerant (MET), activates EcR by forming an EcR/USP heterodimer. MET is also necessary for insect molting hormone to bind and activate EcR, indicating MET may be involved in the transduction of hormone action. The current model of hormone action is that MET both recruits liganded EcR into an active conformation and actively disassembles it into a small mono-ubiquitinated EcR/USP heterodimer that is poised for a new round of hormone-signal transduction. Here, I propose a testable alternative model of MET action. In this model, I posit that MET stabilizes the non-liganded EcR/USP heterodimer through inhibition of its Dishevelled anchor activity. MET thereby keeps EcR in a mono-ubiquitinated state, which is the predominant form of EcR in the cell. This ubiquitination prevents USP binding, hence allowing all the functions of EcR that depend upon USP to operate without inhibition. The ability of MET to inhibit USP in this fashion provides a novel function for MET and suggests that dvault/USP is a molecular clock protein that acts like a cyclic AMP phosphodiesterase. The goal of this proposal is to verify MET function at the molecular level. Specifically, I propose the following aims: 1. To study the capacity of MET to inhibit USP association with other core Ligand-dependent Co-repressors 2. To elucidate MET and the other EcR accessory proteins' roles in EcR inactivation 3. To determine whether MET serves as a molecular clock by examining EcR expression in different phases of the adult insect life cycle to determine whether MET expression is correlated with adult life.

The Best Movie Fight Scenes Ever The fight scene is one of the most exciting parts of a movie, especially when it involves the two most famous on-screen assassins of all time. Now, you don't have to settle for re-watching 'Falling Down' and 'The Matrix' to create your own epic battle sequences. Check out 10 great fighting scenes from the most recent and classic movies for your inspiration. 'Drive' Two great characters battling with their cars in a chase scene over a California freeway isn't something that could go wrong. The car chase that happens on the Golden State Route One between two criminals is as epic as it gets! 'Gladiator' Make sure to check out the battle that happens at the final battle in the movie when the emperor is fully prepared to fight back and kill his defeated rival. You have to see it to believe it. 'Battle Royale' This is a really innovative idea. It involves one girl fighting against all of the students in the school who are forced to fight to the death. Things only get better as the number of kids actually increases. If you like school-sponsored massacres, you'll love this movie. 'Kill Bill Vol. 1' Before all the cool battle scenes and regular action in the second half of the movie, we get a cool action scene where Bill is basically going through a series of different attacks from the assassins. It turns out that the various weapons that he has are even more awesome than you think. 'Fight Club' So this might not be a great way to win a girl's heart. This is a movie about two dudes who go around the world fighting other dudes. The only catch is that the fight is staged in the first person. If that doesn't work for you, just stick to the super cool fight scene that takes place in the beginning of the movie. 'The Terminator' In this movie, the robot people who are about to become the latest in a line of terrible assassin robots try to take over the world. A really clever way to battle with the bad guys is to make them fight each other. But you have to make sure that your actors are really good at fighting. 'Dragon Ball Z' Who doesn't love a good fight scene? And how about a fight scene that takes place on a giant dragon! Even though this is a super cool fight scene, it's still just a regular battle
