The new Raising the Banner of War detail and paint guide is finally here, and its packed with so much new, exciting detail youll need it to get you acclimatised to the new army book. New paints for the Human Cultists are coming along nicely, and are looking very clear and impressive. GW have also offered some really helpful advice on choosing a specific colour to go with each sample, which is so helpful when it comes to getting it right. The Leviathan paints also look really cool, and will be an essential part of the look of the army. Then there are brand new special paint sets, which have been designed to go with each of the new pathfinders and a few of the new sniper units. GW have also provided some example conversions for you to see a couple of the best ways to paint up the new options, including creating your own custom drones. [More information]In March 2017, I was lucky enough to be invited to a tasting with some of their biggest fans, who were there to celebrate the launch of the brand new 'Perfect Vibe' line. The event took place at The Lab, Birkby Brewery, and The Vibe Pool Bar in the heart of Leeds. The whole event was one of celebration, a chance to have some fun with the team and get to meet some of their fans, as well as listen to their story as to why they chose to launch Perfect Vibe. I have very mixed thoughts regarding beer marketing and the release of beer styles. I'm all for bringing new beers to the market, supporting smaller breweries and cracking on with the new economic boom which is still to materialise. But there's also something that makes me feel like people have missed out on a bigger opportunity here; what if Perfect Vibe is able to change perceptions of beer drinkers and the industry all together? The person in charge of Perfect Vibe is Joam MacDonald, who is the founder and owner of the Tattoo Artist Brewery, based in Nelson, Lancashire. It's a modern, funky and colourful place, and although I'm not typically the type of person to go to an event solely about the brewery, Joam has invited me to share some tasting notes on their beers with you, so that you can be part of the conversation too! The first beer on the tasting tables was a beer that was first launched as a one-off beer at a beer festival by the Tattoo Artist Brewery in 2015. The beer was Gipsy, which is a traditional style, but what makes Gipsy so great is that it has been made to reflect the 21st century, in terms of what's going on with the beer sector.

So my copy of the codex arrived yesterday, and I was wondering how it would go in regards to having a better understanding of how much you get for the cost. The codex itself is a small A4 sized book, and its mainly full-colour with black and white on-card pictures to give the interior a lot of colour and really stand out. Also, some of the pictures (the whole codex) are a little large, and you have to be mindful of this when you write in the book. Another small point is that there are three different versions of the codex, and they are all named after him. An early version is first in the edition, followed by the normal version, and the final edition will be the one you get when the launch box with the only difference being the model. New chapters 20/21 for Tactical Marines and Land Raiders looking at the Marines Espaciales del Caos. A cool one here, since it goes into detail on the Marines, focusing on the fun and nasty bits of war that re marked the play style of the current codex. Tau are smart the fun the paranoid, deadly smart. I am therefore very excited about the codex. Tyranids, with new starting templates for Hive Tyrants, Devastators and Muta's! In the new codex that were already applied to the marine guardians. I think there are three more chapters left. But to be honest I think this is a bit more about the imperial war machines, in a way about telling the story of the marines story on each new chapter. But there are some interesting ideas that are applicable. Chapter itself is about two or three special mission types to crack psykers and security and stuff like that. Meca de los Poderes 5ec8ef588b
