The plan backfired, however, as Bane ended up awakening from his comatose state, and went berserk, causing him to break out of the prison. Bane wanted to destroy the Arkham City hospital using a bomb, but he realized that the hospital would be hurt by it, so he decided to save it by stealing the bomb and taking it to the edge of the Batcave's stage. As Bane began to prepare the bomb, the Caped Crusader arrived and they battled, with Bane transforming into a huge, monstrous figure. Both Batman and Bane punched each other and backflipped off the stage, landing off the edge of the Batcave in the Batmobile. Batman got out of the Batmobile and tackled Bane to the ground, restraining his arms and legs, while they stood over the bomb. Bane stared at the Batmobile and started to laugh, believing that he and the Caped Crusader had finished off each other. However, just then, Bane's men arrived to the scene, intending to kill Batman in the hospital. But with their Stingers stopped by Bane's own preternatural strength, and the construction of a giant fist, the men were beat back as Bane and Batman went into the hospital. Inside, they battled on, with Batman was gaining the upper hand, until he used the opportunity to trap Bane, since he was unable to kick Batman's legs off. He then forced Bane into a gigantic, crushing fist made of metal, but the attack was far too powerful for Bane, and he was crushed by the fist. He began screaming for death, but Batman was able to intervene, and blasted Bane in the face with the Venom gun, which hurt him severely. Batman then grabbed Bane and threw him into another fist and his men were able to escape. 5ec8ef588b
